

wi-fi-no-wi-fi

A guide to the study

While the wi-fi-no-wi-fi is in a 'closed form'

We will start with a short interview and delivering the wi-fi-no-wi-fi.

We ask that you live with the wi-fi-no-wi-fi for up to three months. How you live with the wi-fi-no-wi-fi is up to you. It can remain in your home, or you can take it with you wherever you want (as long as it does not get wet!).

During most of the study it will remain in its closed shape signaling that it can detect the presence of a wi-fi network. If the wi-fi-no-wi-fi searches for a network and none are detected, it changes to an open shape. At this point it will stop functioning and remain in the open shape.

You can wait for a time for the wi-fi-no-wi-fi's shape to change on its own, or you can move it to where there are no wi-fi networks to see if it changes shape. Know that it may take up to three to four hours before it searches for a wi-fi network. If the wi-fi-no-fi has not opened near the end of the three month study period, we ask that you try to find a place with no wi-fi networks for it to open.

Once it changes to an open shape, we ask you to contact us and to consider what you might do or want us to help with the wi-fi-no-wi-fi in terms of reuse or disposal.

We may arrange for a short check-in interview with you remotely or in-person a few weeks into the study. We also ask that you occasionally report on your lived with experiences with the wi-fi-no-wi-fi through self-reporting (photographs or posts) on an agreed communication channel.

After the wi-fi-no-wi-fi has 'opened'

After you contact us to tell us that your wi-fi-no-wi-fi has changed shape and is no longer functioning we will arrange an in-person meeting/interview with you.

During the study we provided you with a prompt to plan what to do with the wi-fi-no-wi-fi once it is not active and a guide to disassemble it for reuse, recycling, or disposal.

In the meeting we will ask you to share your plans for the wi-fi-no-wi-fi. This may include us disassembling it for you or taking parts you have disassembled that you do not want even if you decided to simply dispose of the parts as garbage.

Depending on your plan, we may arrange to periodically check in with you if you choose to keep parts of the wi-fi-no-wi-fi.
